1. About Calder Property Group

Calder Property Group is a privately owned Sydney developer founded by Margaret Calder in 2004. Over two decades the group has completed 23 projects with a combined gross development value of A$2,640M, focused on medium and high-density residential in Sydney's northern and western growth corridors.

Since 2021 the group has repositioned towards build-to-rent, retaining completed buildings as long-term income-producing assets rather than selling apartments individually. Calder now manages two stabilised build-to-rent buildings and is leasing a third, with an in-house leasing and resident services team of 18 people.

The group employs 64 people across development, design management, construction oversight and asset management. It does not build its own projects and instead appoints tier-two builders under fixed-price design and construct contracts.

3. Track record

The table below shows the group's seven most recent completed projects. Every facility has been repaid in full or is performing, and no project has reached practical completion more than six weeks after its original program. The longest delay, at Ashfield Quarter, was caused by a late authority connection. Kingsway BTR reached 95% occupancy seven months after completion.
